Academic calendar final 1991-92 highlights less Friday classes

by Nathan Tyson
News Writer

Though we are still working our way through the second trimester of the 1990-91 school year, the academic calendar for 1991-92 has been completed and work on 1992-93 is being organized. This may seem unbelievable but it is the truth. While the process of developing the calendar is foreign to most of us, we appreciate its importance.

This trimester there were several complaints about classes on Fridays or "the break was too short." These are legitimate, but hopefully understanding the development of the calendar will clear up why such things happen.

Our calendar must adhere with certain academic requirements such as 45 contract days for traditional lecture classes and 48 days for culinary laboratory classes. Other considerations are Labor Day, legal and religious holidays, trimester breaks and J&W particulars such as internships and practicums.

"Of all the major considerations the calendar committee must work

King speaks about racism

by Stephen O'Brien
Photography Editor

On Monday, February 11 Martin Luther King the III came to Johnson & Wales University. He lectured on racism in today's society.

He began his lecture discussing the war in the Middle East. He felt "the United States didn't give peace a chance." But he then followed by stating on of the great things that America has is the freedom to express what we believe. He felt that the sancations put on Iraq were not given a long enough period of time to work. He did state, "You should be patriotic to exist here or you could go somewhere else."

King followed by explaining that racism was programmed and promoted. This could happen through different mediums like

African-American History Month

by Sir Ravon Chapman
Sports Writer

The month of February is nationally known as African-American History month. To commemorate the event, Johnson & Wales University has hosted a number of speakers.

Dr. Rowena Stewart, who spoke on Monday, February 4, is currently the director of the Afro-American Historical and Cultural Museum. Her background includes founding and directing the Rhode Island Historical Society, social work and several awards. She remarked on how despite negative media attention, the black family unit in general can be and is a strong institution.

Judge Rogerie Thompson is one of Rhode Island's eminent judges. She lectured to the University on Wednesday, February 13. Thompson began her practice in Rhode Island with Family Law and an emphasis on personal, housing and Native American issues. Her speech focused on the pros and cons of having a Black History Month. The main argument for the events such as these is recognizing, as a nation, the importance of looking at the history of black Americans and their contributions to the country. A point to be made against the existence of such events is a tendency to increase the idea of separation and prejudice.

"If we only study Afro-American history one month and women's history another month, the remaining ten months are spent on white male history."

Marcia Ann Gillespie is known for her work developing "Essence," a magazine targeted at black women. She has also collaborated with Lena Horne on the singer's autobiography, worked for "Ms" magazine and won several journalism awards. She delivered

Operation Desert Storm

by Edmund Brylczyk
News Writer

The air bombardment of Iraq continued in the Gulf Conflict this past week. Since the war began the allies have flown 70,000 sorties. Iraqi soldiers continue to come across the lines offering their surrender. At press time the allies claim to have 1,040 prisoners of war. The Iraqi POWs feel that the constant fighting for the past ten years, allied bombing and shortages of food have forced them to surrender.

On Wednesday, February 13th the U.S. fired two GBU-27 laser guided missiles at what was believed to be a military command bunker in Baghdad. The building was surrounded by barbed wire fencing and had concrete walls six feet thick. The Iraqis claim that the building was purely a bomb shelter for civilians and the civil defense officials claim that there were 500 people killed and 91 of them were children. The allies still claim that it was a military instillation and that Saddam Hussien is using the civilian deaths to break the coalition and win over Arab support.

Personal skills important in business

by Cathy Donnelly
Staff Advisor

On Thursday, February 7, Dr. Frank Tomassi, business professor and his management class hosted a special speaker. Joseph A. Roso, associate vice-president of Blue Cross and Blue Shield attended a dinner and spoke about personal management. Roso, the manager of Blue Cross and Blue Shield's benefit program and utilization review, received his B.S. in Finance and M.S. in Business Administration from Bryant and he also has a private accounting practice and management consulting firm.

"In my job we try to help people manage their resources and not spend money on unnecessary procedures," said Roso, "but I am here to discuss a different type of management today."

"The way that you deal with others is very important. Tact and diplomacy, time management, networking etc. are skills that are required in business today," continued Roso.

Raso proceeded to outline skills and objectives needed in the work force. He also pointed out that managing crises are one mark of a true professional.

"A crisis is not necessarily bad. It can equal opportunity if you manage it well and not panic. By improving your personal skill, especially time management, every challenge helps you move forward," said Roso.

Pastry chef shares skills in week long visit

Benno Eigenmann, executive pastry chef with Max Felchlin AG, one of the premier chocolate manufacturers in Switzerland, shared his expertise and flair for colorful confections with a record number of students and instructors at Johnson & Wales University in January during a week-long visit to the Providence campus.

In addition to conducting classes, Chef Eigenmann spent an entire day demonstrating his candy-making techniques. Only 30 years old, he was the 69th Distinguished Visiting Chef.

"Most products from pastry kitchens are more or less brown, beige and white in color," Chef Eigenmann said. "I try to create new recipes and decorations and to bring more color to the confectionery trade. I believe the time has come for the pastry chef to express himself as an artist. The product served must be not only excellent tasting but also brilliant in appearance."

Chef Eigenmann began his career as a pastry chef at age 17 at a confectioner's shop in Switzerland, where he worked as an apprentice for three years.

Distinguished Visiting Chef

Johanne Killeen and George Germon, Chef-owners of two of Providence's most famous restaurants, Al Forno and Lucky's, will be demonstrating their robust cooking style during their visit to Johnson & Wales on Tuesday, February 19, beginning at 9:00 am.

During their three hour demonstration Killeen and Germon will teach Culinary Arts Division students the art of trattoria cooking.

VIEWPOINTS

DUE TO THE SPRING BREAK, THERE WILL BE NO ISSUE ON FEBRUARY 25 OR MARCH 4. WE WILL PUBLISH THE CAMPUS HERALD AGAIN ON MARCH 11, THE FIRST ISSUE OF THE NEW STUDENT EDITORIAL BOARD. WATCH FOR MORE CHANGES.

Passing the torch Student run newspaper Becomes a reality

by Cathy Donnelly
Staff Advisor

The torch has been passed.

For the first time in approximately 20 years, the student newspaper has a student Editor in Chief.

Carol Rizkallah has accepted the duties of Editor in Chief and is naming her editorial board in her column. Two weeks ago I wrote a column asking you all to support the future board; now you know who they are. They are accepting an awesome responsibility and are performing it for the entire school.

When I joined Johnson & Wales in July, one of my goals was to recruit student staff members and recreate the student newspaper of the past. I was fortunate to discover the talented people making up this masthead and now I have fulfilled that goal. I will still play a role in the production of the paper, but we can now say The Campus Herald is student run.

Although The Campus Herald has been in existence since 1980, it has always been produced by an administrator. We are now producing a student paper that is comparable to other universities and similar to the paper that existed here in the sixties. That paper was called The J&W Herald and it somehow drifted out of existence. (If anyone in the school has old copies of those papers from the fifties and sixties, or more information about that newspaper, I would appreciate it) Since its inception, The Campus Herald has slowly moved towards a student editorial board and has finally reached that destination. But now the journey truly begins.

Mistakes will be made. While I'm sure you feel that I focus on that human foible, I want to help everyone understand that these editors are students first, with all the responsibilities of classes, who volunteer at least 20 hours a week producing the paper. A new, complete paper is created every week; it is not begun several weeks in advance. So until there are more staff members to help produce and proof the paper, you might see several errors. I do not excuse our mistakes but I ask for your understanding. While on that subject I would like to apologize to Dennis Sterlacci, Director of the University Club for the problems over the past tri with publishing the menu and the John Guillemette for not printing his name under the hockey photo in the February 4 issue.

The staff needs more writers, proofreaders and production people. Another major weakness is in the advertising section. At the current time there are no students soliciting or typesetting ads. If anyone is interested in these types of positions, please let Carol or I know. We train all staff members so no experience is necessary. It is a great resume enhancer. Our office is in Student Publications, 6th Floor of the PAR Building and our phone is 456-2804. Feel free to stop up at anytime.

Letters to the Editor must be typed, double spaced and signed with a daytime phone number. Their contents will be published in whole or in part at the discretion of The Campus Herald Editorial Board. Campus Herald names its first editorial board Students take on full responsibility

by Carol Rizkallah
News Editor

As all of you should have noticed by now, there have been many changes taking place in The Campus Herald. All year we have been preparing you for the major change, an official student editorial board.

Elections were held on Monday, February 11, and I am now introducing myself to you as the Editor in Chief elect of the 1991-1992 Campus Herald. I am a freshman, originally from metropolitan Detroit and am majoring in Hotel Restaurant Management. I have had the role of News Editor since the October 15 issue. My editorial board and I will present our first issue to you on Monday, March 11.

I have had the last week to name my editorial board based on written letters of intent and staff suggestions. Edmund Brylczyk, former news writer, has been named News Editor. John Lambros, former staff artist and creator of Lurd, has been chosen as Art Editor. Mike Mineau, former sports writer, will take over as Sports Editor. Current Photography Editor, Stephen O'Brien, is graduating and will be followed by Amy Slate, former news writer. There are still open positions on the board, such as Feature Editor, Advertising Editor, Production Editor and Copy Editor. Anyone interested in being considered for an editor's position or in being a staff member should contact me at 455-2804 or leave a message.

Being that we will now take on 100% responsibility for the newspaper, we will be making some changes in format starting with the beginning of the third trimester.

First of all page 2 will no longer be entirely Campus Notices. It will be used to begin viewpoints or continue news articles. Information previously printed on this page will be made into news stories, features or left in briefs at the bottom of the page. Regular columns will be placed elsewhere.

Hall, where it then turned back the opposite way. It proceeded to Xavier Hall, turned once more and ended up at Abbott Park. Various international students marched in the parade waving the flags of the Allied Forces and of the countries represented here at Johnson & Wales. Noel Valeso sang a strong rendition of the national anthem accompanied by the marching band, Night Life Orchestra.

Scott Chaney then began the speeches. He made very clear what he feels are the reasons for the war.

"This is not a war for oil; this is not another Viet Nam. This is the end of the reign of a madman. A man who chases world domination at any cost. Whether you support the war or not is no longer an issue, the war has already begun. Our troops are over there and we need to support them."

A little later, Pimentel spoke of the soldiers who have had their educations at Johnson & Wales interrupted for active duty. Those from the Providence campus are: Jonathon Krause, Marc Hamel, Terry Persun, Rita Tabora, Fred Bieler, Daniel Hogan, Matthew Gartley, Greg Martinez, Brian Pack, David Fluette, Thomas Scalavino, Stephen Lipa and Gary Cockerham. Students from the Charleston branch are: Christopher Leonard Britton, Andre L. Brooks and John T. King. Those who were attending the Norfolk campus are: David Oliver, John Codianne, Donald Hallowell, John Jackson and Lynette Allison. He extended the University's hopes and prayers that they all return quickly and safely.

One of the officers from the National Guard spoke of the troops attitudes when they left for the Gulf.

"They were positive that the right actions were being taken. Their only concerns were that their families be taken care of and that they be welcomed home the same way they were being sent off, with proudness and cheers.

Gurs closed the ceremony with a touching speech of the everyday attitudes about war.

"In these dark times, let this chain of light join all nations of the world in friendship. With busy routines and deadlines it is sometimes very difficult to realize from a distance what it is really like, for all the men and women fighting in this conflict. That is why we are now all together. It is a unique opportunity to really think about war, and the hope for peace,

"As we light up the night sky, let us bow our heads and dedicate our thoughts to them in one minute of silence," said Gurs.

He then requested that everyone light their candles and pray for the troops. The song "From a Distance" by Bette Midler was played and brought tears to the eyes of many in the crowd.

with, Labor Day causes the most problems. It is a floating holiday which means that depending on where it falls determines whether or not we start 'early.' We do not want to start classes before Labor Day because many students work up until the end of that weekend," said Steve Calabro, Dean of Academic Administration.

Some of the highlights of next year's calendar includes: an extended holiday break during second trimester from December 20 until January 5, 1992; three Friday classes in the first tri, one in the second and one in the third trimester; classes begin in September on the 11th and finally graduation will be May 23, 1992.

Each calendar is thoughtfully discussed and argued about in order to make the best calendar possible. The committee meets once a month and accepts any suggestions. The committee consists of: Divisional Deans: Dr. Louis D'Abrosca, Paul LaCroix, Robert Nograd, David Mello, Dr. Irving Schneider and Thomas Wright; Practicum Properties: Jennifer Aldrich, Karen Miller and Anne Marie Folcarelli; Executive Committee/Planning Committee: Manuel Pimentel; Admissions: Mark Burke; Business Faculty: Al Martin and Richard Wenzel and Culinary Faculty: Steve Browchuk and SCR representative Marc Lubetkin.

As students we had the opportunity to become educated and aware of racial issues. Students have always been involved in change, on the front of the struggle.

For example, in 1961 students (black and white) were responsible for desegregating interstate busing. In 1963 the Birmingham movement resulted in 3,000 high school students being arrested. Due to the media, the public reacted to this incident more than any other. The general feeling being it was alright to arrest men and women but what is this country coming to when it does not take care of its children.

The feature section will run from pages 6-9. The centerfold will be renamed Potpourri. The literal meaning of the word is a medley or mixture. We are attempting to begin some regular feature columns such as cartoons, horoscopes and movie, restaurant and music reviews. Club and organizational activities information will still be accepted. Again, some of the regular columns will continue. We are also going to try out a creative writing column filled with your submissions. Any other suggestions for the section are welcomed.

Just for the record, our goal is not to take away from the university community, but to expand the communication lines. We will be experimenting with different ideas and we are sure to make some mistakes, but we will be the first to criticize ourselves. We are completely willing to admit to and apologize for our mistakes. Any critiques or congratulatory remarks are welcome, but it is helpful if the person identifies him/herself.

Not all policies will be changing. Deadlines for general submissions is 4pm on Monday and letters to the editor must be in by Tuesday, 4pm. Unsolicited articles are not guaranteed space. If you want to be considered for a story, you must notify me by the Friday two weeks prior to the event so it can be discussed at the board meeting and assigned to a staff person. Keep in mind that each week we are working on the next issue.

Anything turned in to The Campus Herald becomes our property and will not be returned. We will edit when necessary and all submissions must be typed, double spaced and accompanied by a name and a daytime telephone number.

Once again we are located in the Office of Student Publications on the 6th floor of the PAR building. Thank you for your support and I trust it will continue.

MAINTAINING WEIGHT LOSS

Many people have had the experience of successfully depriving themselves long enough to lose weight. It is a heady experience until the scale shows that you have gained five pounds overnight even though you feel you have eaten sparingly. Such are the woes of the chronic dieter, but help is on the way to smooth these peaks and valleys.

"Dieting" actually, is not the proper way to describe weight management. How to change your food habits and still love food that is good for you is more accurate. The diet that you chose to follow for the rest of your life needs to be varied, balanced, and likeable. You calmly chose foods that are nutritious most of the time and don't feel great guilt over consuming food that you don't consider "diet" foods. Because you can have such foods you won't overindulge. You avoid thinking about food all of the time by finding enjoyments outside of food. Worrying over the next meal, what will be served at the party and other food obsessions only makes you hungry. It makes you a restrained eater-one who tries to stay in tight control and fears "losing it". Worrying so much over food takes its enjoyment away. If you have followed the dirt over time to slowly lose weight, it is second nature by now. You didn't lose weight rapidly and so weight changes will be minimized. Don't weigh yourself daily; once a week is enough is plenty to check your progress.

To your health

Exercise is the only way to get your body stoked to burn more calories. as you exercise, you will convert fat cells to muscle and that alone will burn many more calories. Your metabolism will burn faster up to 24 hours after an exercise session. Exercise is for life too, so start slow, select activities that you really enjoy and stick with it. Remember, though, that scale will appear to play "tricks" on you as you exercise more. As you convert fat to muscle the body can actually gain weight, since muscle weighs more than fat.

You can see that the diet and exercise are as much of an attitude as they are an activity. You need to love and accept yourself and praise yourself for your progress. It will take time to make a philosophical overhaul. You also need to consider the fact that you may have an unrealistic idea of what you should weigh. Chasing that last five pounds for the rest of your life may not be worth it. For times of the year when you see your weight normally increase, like the holidays, you may need to make some slight adjustments. This does not mean dieting in January. Overeating one day and undereating another is all a part of the normal eating experience. Trust yourself to balance it out by following your appetite.

Clothing drive

This year's grand total of donated clothing came to an overwhelming 4,679 pieces! The initial goal was 2,500. Some 600 items were brought to the West End Community Center in Providence which serves underprivileged families and parenting teens.

This year's largest donor was Minden Hall which is under the direction of Betsy Sullivan. I also want to extend a special thanks to the kitchen staff and Rita the receptionist for their generous donation of 295 items! This all helped to bring Dreyfus Hall to second place among donations. Also, thanks to John McKelvy and Zeta Beta Tau for helping me collect all of the clothing.

Minden evacuated

On Monday night February 11, Minden Hall had two electrical fuses blow and create a considerable cloud of smoke. The elevator shaft acted as a chimney and sucked most of the smoke out of the building.

The building was evacuated to determine the extent of the damage and it was found that the fire alarm system had lost power. The students were allowed back into the building after safety was assured and the Resident Assistants maintained a fire watch for the rest of the night.

Winter Week highlights

by Nathan Tyson
News writer

Winter Week was another huge success from the Student Activities department and the Student Activities Committee (SAC). Chaired by Karen Benyoseph, the week was full of many varied and exciting activities.

It began Monday, February 4, with a Roving Magician in Cafe Commons and the Gymside Cafe. The event attracted over 100 students. That evening students who stopped by Cafe Commons had the pleasure of listening to Dave Binder perform some of James Taylor's greatest hits. Over 175 people attended the concert.

Tuesday everyone had the opportunity to have their picture put on a mug in Chestnuts. Over 120 people took advantage of this opportunity. "It was such a huge success that we will try to bring them back this again this year," said Theresa Beebe, assistant chairperson of Winter Week.

Tuesday night Trent Arterberry entertained approximately 50 students with his mime routines.

During the day on Wednesday two caricature artists graced Chestnuts and Cafe Commons. Since this event was very popular SAC will also try to bring them back. Wednesday night J&W was entertained by the savvy wit and musical talent of Jim Femino. Over 100 people attended.

Mr. Magic Head was the daytime entertainment for Thursday entertaining hundreds in Chestnuts. That evening Starmaker gave people in Hospitality's cafeteria the opportunity to make a video.

The annual Snoball closed Winter Week Friday night at Rocky Point. The event was a sell-out with 600 people attending.

Snoball highlights included announcing Ken Marshall and Stacie Sikora as King and Queen; an accapella group alternating with a video disc jockey; professional photos; an excellent dinner and the surprise proposal of Kevin Brown to Mindee Bulles. (She said Yes!)

Photo highlights of Winter Week can be seen on page eight. Congratulations to everyone who made Winter Week such a success.

Retail internships

On January 3, a group of retail interns visited Lord John Ltd., a men's specialty store located at 82 Weybosset Street. The store contains a high fashion Italian collection of men's designer clothing including coats, suits, shirts, pants, ties and a variety of accessories.

The group was greeted by store owner, John Souto. Souto stressed the importance of being involved in every facet of his store.

He also commented on two crucial concerns of the retail industry, the economic recession and the Rhode Island banking crisis.

On January 18 the retail interns visited Bob Lapidus, the owner of a chain in Connecticut, Bob's Stores. The students were given a tour and were informed about his merchandise distribution center and employee training.

Known for their work boots and their Levi's Jeans, which they price at one penny above cost, the chain does quite well in the shoe and apparel business.

The Distribution Center at Bob's takes care of all the shipping and receiving. They ticket and hang all apparel before leaving the warehouse, so as soon as it hits the stores it can be put on the floor.

His training program lasts twelve weeks. Eight weeks are spent reviewing the store, working with customers and the merchandise. The next four weeks are spent in a specific department.

Yolanda's Boutique in Waltham, Massachusetts was the destination for the January 11 trip. The shop specializes in beauty, fashion and health, all with excellent service. The tour of the facilities included a pool, whirlpool, aerobic classes, fitness equipment, massage rooms, coffee shop, sunbeds, saunas and a full beauty salon plus two floors of designer fashions.

The store makes an estimated $5 million in sales annually, partly due to the fact that Yolanda makes it a point to know each customer by name and provide each of them with personal service.

... War thoughts

and other social services like schools and child care. Not to mention the tax breaks for the rich and extra taxes for the poor and middle classes.

Yet, in 1991, with a homeless problem and a real need for social services we suddenly have billions of dollars to spend on a war we started. I think that money is better spent at home. I don't know the cost of the sanctions or the blockade, but it must have been cheaper than the war.

As a minority in America I am appalled at the disproportionate numbers of minorities in the Gulf. I believe that when war was declared that the draft should have been enacted in order to equalize the number of soldiers from different socio-economic backgrounds as well as different races.

Let me sum up my viewpoint by sending my prayers out to the troops be they any race or from any part of the country. May they return safely and may they have a loving country to return to. They are only soldiers trained for battle, they are only following orders, they cannot be blamed for the war. The ones to blame are the power hungry war mongers giving the orders. They are the ones who care more about the bottom line than the people at the bottom.

Fitness achievers

Carol Lindberg, Chris Bates, and Sandra Leecy were chosen as Fitness Achievers for the Month of February.

Leecy, a sophomore, majoring in Pastry Arts started exercising in the Fitness Center last year. Her exercise program consists of working out for one hour almost every day. Leecy's dedication to exercise shows, "You should keep going even when the going gets tough," she said.

Bates, a first year Culinary Arts Major, is from New Hampshire. He is a runner and has been running for four years, averaging 6 to 10 miles every day. Bates will run during any weather, but when it's too cold or icy he likes to workout in the Fitness Center.

Carol Lindberg, an employee at J&W, is the Director of Payroll Services. She exercises every morning in the Fitness Center before she starts work.

ACE targets new businesses

by Antoine Nyandwi
Sports Writer

On Wednesday, January 30, the Association of Collegiate Entrepreneurs (ACE) hosted David P. Claire, business professor. He is not only an educator but also a successful businessman.

Claire focused his discussion on marketing your own business. Claire outlined the steps needed to start a business as well as the fact that you can have a successful business without major advertising. "There are many ways to market your business, you don't need television or radio commercials," said Claire.

Claire reminded ACE that every marketing plan needs to be simple and realistic. He also suggested that when a new business is started that each person "hire themselves first" and then develop the rest of the staff.

Since all ACE members generally want to have their own business someday, this lecture was very informative and well worth attending.

Thoughts about the war

My feelings on the war.

First, let me say that I pray to God that this war does not last long and that many men and women come home to their families as soon as possible.

Now, as a minority in the United States let me formally protest the war and the lack of patience on the

by Sir Ravon
Chapman
Sports Editor

part of our government. I believe that we should have given the sanctions more time to work. The amount of time given to the sanctions cannot begin to compare with the amount of lives and money being spent on the war.

Some people might argue that we are fighting to stop an evil dictatorship that oppresses and kills its own people. Sounds like a good reason to me. But, if that is the case, why don't we bomb South Africa? There the minority white class oppress and kill people in South Africa. With South Africa we use sanctions, in Iraq we use bombs.

Why bomb Iraq instead of South Africa? Let me tell you, the answer is as close as your wallet. Attacking Iraq allows the United States to gain a foothold in the Middle East. The U.S. through diplomatic means and covert operations have been trying to establish some control there for years. Now we have the chance, no matter what the outcome of the war. Whenever fighting ceases, the U.S. will have to stay to rebuild Iraq and Kuwait. If we are lucky we will gain a permanent base or maybe even influence one of the countries into democracy. So, no this is not Vietnam over again, it is worse because of the bottom line.

Our military says that we have flown thousands of bombing missions, are there really thousands of military targets in Iraq and Kuwait? Out of all those raids we have seen only a few pictures on television. I think that we are being misinformed. I do not blame the press for that, I blame the military. In Vietnam, people did not become inflamed at the beginning, rather it was after we were deep in the conflict and soldiers came home and told us how bad it was. The number of body bags could not be ignored either. Believe only half of what you see and nothing you hear, we are being subjected to a snow job. When we realize this we can begin to question if we are being told fact or fiction.

I pose another question. Where is the money coming from to pay for all this? Does the U.S. government have Swiss Bank accounts we don't know about? Does the trillion dollar deficit not exist? Is our economy not declining and the country not heading into a recession? If I am not mistaken, wasn't the government about to close down a few years ago unless drastic budget measures were adopted? Those cuts came from Medicaid, Medicare and other

Slama-jama another success

by Antoine Nyandwi
Sports Writer

Two weeks ago, the Black Student Union (BSU) sponsored the second Slama-Jama basketball game. The event took place at the Culinary Gym. It was packed with J&W students and interested onlookers. There were two games played and 16 of J&W's best players participated. The opposition were well-known locals from Rainbow Records in Providence.

The game was competitive from the start. The crowd was treated to exciting play with J&W down in the first, coming back to tie in the second, forcing a furious overtime. J&W maintained the lead for most of the overtime, although unfortunately relinquishing it in the end. The final score was 64-62. The lead scorers were Antoine Nyandwi with 12 points for J&W and Danny Sykes with 12 points for the opposition.

The second game was dominated by Johnson & Wales. J&W won the game handily by a score of 70-49. Barry Farrah lead J&W with a balanced scoring attack with 20 points.

The games were organized well by BSU and hopefully more games will be coordinated before the end of the year.

Kiam's back and worse than ever

by Mike Mineau, Sports Writer

He's back. Just when you thought it was safe to read the sports page again, Victor Kiam is back in the headlines. This time for a tasteless joke comparing a Boston Herald sports writer to the Iraqis. Kiam, the owner of the New England Patriots is nothing more than a crass and unprofessional individual who obviously is insensitive to the crisis in the Middle East.

It's no wonder the Patriots had the worst record in football last year, and are being touted as the worst team ever. Kiam's contribution to football is about as much as Milli Vanilli's contribution to the music industry. He is an embarrassment to the New England Patriots organization, as well as the National Football League.

Kiam is the laughing stock of professional sports and probably will continue to be if he keeps pulling sophomoric stunts. Bill Reynolds of the Providence Journal put it best when he said, "at 1-15 the Patriots had a better year than Victor Kiam."

J&W senior to hold his last fight

Dave Monte, a senior at J&W, will once again be competing in a six round light-heavyweight boxing match on March 9th. The sight has not yet been confirmed, but it will be in the area.

Monte, who is in the process of opening his third restaurant, says that outside responsibilities have forced this to be his last fight.

He stresses the importance of this fight not only since it is his last, but because all his winnings are being donated to helping a family meet financial needs for their son/daughter attending Johnson & Wales.
